

Account Aggregator Details

An Account Aggregator (AA) is an entity regulated by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI). They use technology to share or transfer an individual's (policyholder/accountholder) information within the Account Aggregator network of financial institutions, insurance companies, or mutual fund firms. The information transfer is carried out securely, where the data is encrypted and digitally signed.

However, all this information cannot be shared or transferred without the individual's or consumer's consent. The Account Aggregator can also enable consumers to share the information or even withdraw it selectively. An Account Aggregator shares data with a Financial Information User (FIU) from a Financial Information Provider (FIP) only when the user gives their explicit consent.
